

“Baking Mistake”
By Logan Chown

Once there was a kid named Johnny who thought he should make a cake. He made the cake so good! When he put the sugar in the cake he didn't know it was full of poison. Johnny put the cake in the oven and then went straight to baking some chocolate chip cookies.

In the oven the cake started getting really big. The cake turned into a cake monster! Its eyes were made out of icing. Its hands were made out of icing. He had poison swords in his back and he was full of gummies. Suddenly the oven started shake, get smoky and light on fire.

Johnny looked at his cake. Johnny started to get really nervous! An icing hand slipped out of the oven door and the oven exploded. The cake monster was alive! Johnny ran to his dad who was also a hunter who had just returned from hunting wolves. Johnny's dad saw the cake monster and started to shoot the monster blasting its arm off. The cake monster turned into a ball with spikes around it and rolled into Johnny and his dad.

Johnny's mom grabbed a frying pan and smacked the cake monster in the face. “You think he is dead?” asked Johnny's dad. Suddenly, the cake monster rose up. Johnny's dad shot the cake monster three times. The poison was knocked out of the cake monster and he turned back into regular delicious cake.

*Yikes!
Good imagination!*
